What it is and how to subscribe.

WHAT IS HOMEBREWER?

HOMEBREWER Magazine is a quarterly publication of the American QRP Club. Typically containing over 200 pages of QRP-related homebrewing construction and technical articles, it is intended for builders, experimenters, ham radio operators and low power enthusiasts all around the world.

Each issue, HOMEBREWER features many of homebrew projects for beginners all the way up to the advanced digital and RF experimenters.

HOMEBREWER also has regular columns and contributions on membership happenings, field operations, commercial equipment reviews and contesting.

FORMAT

AmQRP HOMEBREWER Magazine is now published on a CD-ROM ... a "first" in the QRP homebrewing community and it brings about many benefits for subscribers - tons more articles than are normally available in printed format, full color and hi-resolution graphic images, additional background material, and extra files, programs and spreadsheets that support the authors' material. Further, everything is "linked" to allow you to navigate the entire issue's contents using your Internet browser.

PUBLICATION FREQUENCY

AmQRP HOMEBREWER Magazine is published four times a year, roughly corresponding to the seasons of spring, summer, winter and fall. The fully volunteer magazine staff does its best to publish the magazine on this regular schedule - but if they fall behind, they are dedicated to catch up and provide all subscribers their full content of the subscription ... guaranteed!

Past ISSUES & BONUS MATERIAL

We include all previous issues, detailed sections on current Kits and past kits (aka "projects"), including all manuals, schematics, software, pcb layouts, etc. It's a great reference bank of technical homebrewing information!

QUALITY

The quality of journal is intended to be first class in every respect, including technical content, editing integrity and journalistic standards.
